ST PAUL'S
ANGLICAN CARLINGFORD

Traditional burials

The St Paul's Anglican Cemetery in Carlingford has more than 150 places remaining available throughout the cemetery grounds for traditional casket burials.

A new chapter for St Paul's Historic Cemetery

For 170 years, St Paul's Anglican Carlingford has cared for its parish cemetery, the final resting place for generations of St Paul's parishioners and many of the Parramatta district's pioneering families.

Nestled between private homes, Simpson Reserve, and the former Catts (and later Swanes) nursery off Marsden Road, this historic cemetery is situated not far from the original historic sandstone St Paul's church building on Mobbs Hill.

The land was granted to St Paul's in 1847 by local farming identity William Mobbs Jr. It was his father, Willam Mobbs Sr. who became the first person laid to rest there after he passed away in July 1851.

St Paul's Cemetery has been in continual operation since that time and is now entering a new chapter.

The Cemetery Committee is currently revitalising the property so this hidden historical gem can continue to fulfil the purpose for which it was originally established.

The new Memorial Garden offers an updated option for the interment of ashes for St Paul's parishioners and the wider community alike. The Cemetery grounds also offer a large number of vacant plots for traditional full casket burials.

Cemetery renewal progress

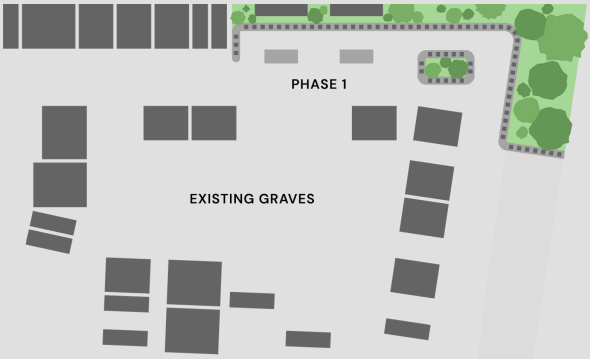

We engaged a landscape architect to develop a master plan for the cemetery, and landscape engineers have now completed construction of the new columbaria walls and garden edges, with final landscaping completed in December 2026.

The new garden features pathways, tree and shrub plantings, flower beds, seating and several options for the interment of ashes - something which has never before been available in the St Paul's cemetery.

Nearly 80 new niches have already been purchased by current St Paul's parishioners for their own future use or for family members.
